Birth of World Nature Conservation Day (1972) The formal birth of World Nature Conservation Day took place in 1972 at the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment in Stockholm, Sweden. Recognizing the urgent need for global environmental action, the UN General Assembly officially designated July 28th as a day to raise awareness about the importance of protecting nature. Evolution and Growing Focus (Late 20th – 21st Centuries) In the following decades, World Nature Conservation Day gained momentum, with various environmental organizations and governments organizing awareness campaigns and events. The focus gradually shifted from general conservation to highlighting specific themes and challenges each year.

These themes often align with contemporary environmental issues like climate change, deforestation, endangered species, and pollution. The day became a platform for advocacy, urging policymakers to implement stricter environmental regulations and promoting sustainable practices among individuals and communities. Today and Beyond Today, World Nature Conservation Day is celebrated worldwide with diverse activities and campaigns. It serves as a critical reminder of our responsibility towards protecting nature and building a sustainable future.

The ongoing challenges of climate change, biodiversity loss, and resource depletion continue to underscore the importance of this day. Looking ahead, World Nature Conservation Day will likely evolve further, reflecting new environmental concerns and promoting innovative solutions for a healthier planet.

SIGNIFICANCE OF WORLD NATURE CONSERVATION DAY

It shines a spotlight on the crucial role nature plays in our lives, providing essential resources like clean air, water, food, and medicine. It highlights the threats facing our natural world, such as climate change, habitat loss, pollution, and biodiversity loss, urging us to take action. By raising awareness, the day educates individuals and communities about the importance of protecting nature and inspires them to adopt sustainable practices. World Nature Conservation Day catalyzes action, encouraging individuals, organizations, and governments to take concrete steps towards protecting the environment. It fosters collaboration and partnerships between different stakeholders, uniting them under a common goal of safeguarding our planet's resources and biodiversity. World Nature Conservation Day is also a time to celebrate the successes achieved in conservation efforts. It recognizes the tireless work of individuals, organizations, and governments who dedicate themselves to protecting the environment. Highlighting these achievements inspires others to continue their efforts and provides hope for a future where nature thrives. Current, multidisciplinary research has become the most viable and efficient way to solve the problem. In this era of rapidly changing society, many kinds of Socio-economics problems, related to other disciplines such as politics, anthropology, psychology, have arisen which require a holistic approach to find their solution.

When we speak of a multidisciplinary, transdisciplinary or interdisciplinary research team, we imply collaboration between people from different disciplines. Thus, the concept of a multidisciplinary research team can be considered as subset of the concept of collaborative research.
